

County Supervisor Office, Not School Consolidation, Is Issue, Says Stephens

"Replying to the whispering campaign which is now going on in the outlying school districts of our county I want to make the following statement:

"1. I am not interested in changing or moving any school district from its present status.

"2. I am only interested in helping Hempstead county get rid of the useless expense of the County School Supervisor office — an expense which is costing us more than $8,000 annually in school funds. That's a net loss of $80,000 in school funds over a 10-year period — and means another $80,000 loss in the net 10 years unless we act now to get rid of the office.

"3. This useless waste of school money on an obsolete office is the issue — THE ONLY ISSUE — when you go to the polls to vote for the county-at-large post on the County Board of Education Dec. 5.

No Secret Deals, Says Finn Leader

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — President Urho Kekkonen says he made no secret deals with Soviet Premier Khrushchev to secure suspension of his demand for Soviet-Finnish defense talks.

"There are no secret conditions of any kind and no secret agreements between Finland and the Soviet Union," Kekkonen assured the anxious Finnish people Sunday on his return from his week-end meeting with Khrushchev.

A cheering crowd of 15,000 welcomed the Finnish president back from his successful mission to get Khrushchev to put off demands for military talks that would bring Finland into the cold war.

Moscow had called for military consultations to combat what the Soviets described as a rising West German military threat in the Baltic area.

Kekkonen, in a broadcast to the nation, said he could appreciate the Soviet fears but that the communists issued after his talks with Khrushchev made plain that "the opening of possible military consultations in the future primarily is the duty of Finland."

Death Toll Over Holiday Reaches 564

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Traffic	432
Fires	38
Miscellaneous	94
Total	564

The nation's traffic deaths during the extended Thanksgiving weekend may be lower than the toll for the same holiday period in recent years.

Belated reports may boost the final count, but at the end of the 102-hour holiday period last mid-night, an Associated Press survey showed 432 persons killed in traffic accidents. That compared to 442 highway deaths for a similar period last Thanksgiving, 448 in 1959 and 454 in 1958.

In other violent deaths since the count started at 6 p. m. local time Wednesday, 38 persons perished in fires and 94 others lost their lives in miscellaneous types of accidents. The over-all toll of 564 this year compared to 608 in 1960, 650 in 1959 and 626 in 1958. The National Safety Council did not estimate a traffic death toll for the Thanksgiving holiday period. However, it said deaths on the highway for a non-holiday weekend at this time of year would total 450.

An Associated Press survey for the 102-hour period from 6 p. m. Wednesday Nov. 8 to midnight Sunday Nov. 12 showed 462 traffic fatalities, 37 killed in fires and 166 deaths in miscellaneous accidents, an over-all total of 665.

UN Troops Take Over Kindu

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP)—The United Nations today announced its Ethiopian troops have taken control of the multi-ethnic town of Kindu, where Congolese troops slaughtered 13 Italian U.N. airmen.

No details of the takeover were announced except that the European population—estimated at 81—is well and safe.

Since the massacre two weeks ago, U.N. forces had been confined to the airport, with only occasional reconnaissance forays into the town controlled by the Congolese troops.

Final Rites for Sen. Bridges on Wednesday

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — A funeral service at the New Hampshire state house at noon Wednesday is planned for Sen. Styles Bridges, 63, senior Republican member of the Senate, who died Sunday.

Bridges' death was not likely to change the present partisan lineup in the Senate but a liberal-conservative struggle to choose a successor in the Senate Republican leadership appeared possible when Congress reconvenes in January.

President Kennedy led the tributes to the Senate chairman of the powerful Appropriations Committee and second ranking Republican on the Armed Services Committee.

Many political observers in traditionally Republican New Hampshire believed Republican Gov. Wesley Powell, a graduate of Bridges' staff, would be appointed to succeed him, although some other reports mentioned Bridges' widow.

The appointee will hold the seat only until the 1962 election, when the voters will choose a senator to complete the balance of Bridges' term, which expires in 1966.

Powell can not appoint himself. He would have to resign as governor and be appointed by his successor, the president of the state Senate, Samuel Green, a Manchester Republican.

Bridges' office said the senator "died peacefully in his sleep at 5 a. m. in his Concord, N.H., home, by complications arising from a severe coronary attack suffered Sept. 20."

Bridges entered a Washington hospital Aug. 18 with severe pulmonary congestion and on Sept. 20 at Concord suffered what his physician called a moderately severe heart attack. He was discharged from the hospital Nov. 3. He was "born and reared on a small farm in West Pembroke, Maine."

In the Senate, Bridges generally was regarded as an articulate spokesman for the conservative point of view, though he regarded himself as a "middle-of-the-roader."

Bridges was one of the lively vivante of party leaders in the Senate along with Sens. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, the GOP floor leader, and Leverett Saltonstall, Massachusetts, chairman of the conference of Republican senators.

Washington speculated that liberals among the GOP senators may try to fill Bridges' place as policy committee chairman from among their own ranks.

In 1959, at the opening of the 86th Congress, the liberals made a similar move, but their candidate for floor leader, Sen. John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky, lost to Dirksen, 20-14. Bridges was a leader in the Dirksen camp.

Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont could be the liberals' choice for the policy committee if a contest develops. Aiken now outranks GOP senators in seniority except for Sen. Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin.

State May Have Paid High for Land

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—A report that the state paid a "pretty high price" for park land for Chicout State Park near Lake Village is being investigated by the Legislative Auditing Committee.

The inquiry will also cover the park superintendent's operation of five rental cottages on land near the park.

Sen. Roy Milum, a member of the committee, said he had been told a high price had been paid for the park land.

The purchase price for the 65 acres was reportedly $15,000.

Regarding the cottage operation, the committee report said Superintendent M. R. Causey was running them in conflict with a restriction in the deed.

The audit indicated that state officials and employees had stayed in one of the park cottages without paying the required rent. Causey's action was defended by Ovid T. Switzer of Crossett, a commission member, who said Causey paid a percentage of the profits to the state.

Switzer also said the park's facilities were inadequate.

No action was taken on the case which was continued until the next committee meeting. Also continued was the audit report for the state Civil Defense office where $1,900 was not accounted for.

Says Public Wants Better Highways

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Highway officials from 12 states were told today that public complaints about gas taxes are declining as the public realizes the value of better highways.

The future of modern interstate highways were discussed at the opening session of the 20th annual convention of the Southeastern Association of State Highway Officials.

John R. Phillips, chairman of the Florida Road Department, said the public can see that it is cheaper to pay for better highways through the gas tax than to buy new tires more often and consume more gas because of increased stopping and starting.

The group noted that a major problem facing highway departments in all states is the acquisition of rights-of-way.

"This procedure often takes a year or more to complete which is merely a delay in construction," F. R. Oliver, association president and director of the Arkansas State Highway Commission, said.

Other speakers at the convention which ends Thursday include Gov. Orval E. Faubus and Rex Whitton, federal highway director.

Hopes Fading in Search for Rockefeller

By ROBERT MYERS.

MERUAKE, Dutch New Guinea (AP)—Hope for Michael Rockefeller faded again today as wisps of smoke wafting up from the steamy Asmat jungle off which he disappeared eight days ago were identified as burning brush.

The smoke was spotted Sunday by an Australian air force plane, raising hopes at the search headquarters. Dutch officials said an investigation proved to be "a wild goose chase."

Helicopters criss-crossing the jungle wilderness of southwest New Guinea were scheduled to end their search Tuesday night. Michael's father, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, and his sister, Mary Stranbridge, were expected to leave for the United States soon after.

Ground parties will continue to comb the crocodile-infested jungle coast for at least two more weeks. "We still have one hope," a Dutch district official said. "It's possible Michael might be sick or injured and given aid and shelter by the natives."

"In this eventuality it's also possible that the natives would not tell authorities about his whereabouts until after he recuperated. They might be afraid they would be blamed for his illness."

Dr. Rene S. Wassing, the Dutch anthropologist with Rockefeller when their native calamarian cap sized and was swept out to sea, said he was "90 per cent positive" the six-gallon, red gasoline can found south of New Guinea Saturday was one of two Michael used as a buoy when he set out on his 3 1/2-mile swim to shore. Wassing stayed with their overturned raft and was rescued.

Shakeup in State Department Finds 10 Changes

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy is removing Chester Bowles as undersecretary of state in a sweeping shakeup of the administration's foreign policy high command. The changes involve 10 White House and State Department officials.

No one is being dropped.

Bowles, former governor of Connecticut and ambassador to OPA, an also a Kennedy advisor during last year's presidential race, has been a controversial figure in the administration since its first weeks in office. The President and Secretary of State Dean Rusk were reported to consider him misplaced in the department's No. 2 position as undersecretary.

The shakeup announcement, made Sunday night from the Kennedy headquarters at Hyannis Port, Mass., said that Bowles was to get a high policy-making position on relinquishing his present duties. There was no immediate statement from Bowles.

Officials here understood that he was being offered a combination assignment of roving ambassador and special foreign adviser to Kennedy and Rusk, as undersecretary he has spent considerable time traveling abroad and has been interested, within the State Department, chiefly in promoting policies of assistance to underdeveloped nations in Africa and Asia.

Administration leaders considered him misplaced as undersecretary, officials said, because he was more concerned with the broad lines of policy development in functioning as an idea man than in the day-to-day conduct of foreign relations traditionally handled by the undersecretary. Bowles is 60.

Other changes in the shakeup, which become effective immediately, are these:

1. George W. Ball, 51, undersecretary of state for economic affairs, to be undersecretary of

Anti-trust Suit Filed by U. S. Against Ford

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department filed a civil antitrust suit today against the Ford Motor Co. over its acquisition of Electric Autolite Co. of Toledo, Ohio.

The suit was filed in U. S. District Court in Detroit. A department spokesman said the suit asks the court to order Ford divest itself of two manufacturing plants, sales facilities and the "Autolite" trade name it acquired last spring from the Electric Autolite Co. of Toledo, Ohio.

The government charged that Ford's acquisition could substantially decrease competition in the spark plug business and in other automobile parts.

Sentence Is Upheld by State Court

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The Arkansas Supreme Court upheld the one-year prison sentence of Mr. and Mrs. Rex Ledford who were convicted of twice attempting to burn their home near Atkins.

The unanimous decision, returned by Justice Paul Ward, said that evidence against the couple was circumstantial but enough to justify the Pope Circuit Court verdict.

The fires occurred last January and officers said most of the Ledford's clothing and a television set had been removed before the fire and stored in a shed.

"There can be no doubt that both fires were of deliberate origin," Ward wrote.

In another decision, the court upheld a Logan Chancery Court order directing Fredrick Salzer to remove a fence from crossing a county line.

The unanimous decision by Chief Justice Carleton Harris said the public has acquired the right to use the road although the property owners never formally dedicated it as a road.

Salzer acquired the land in 1949 and erected the fence last year. County officials argued the road had been used for 50 years by the public and was maintained by the county.

The road leads to a cemetery near Magazine.

HOURS TO KILL

BY UNISULA CURTIS

THE STORY: In addition to the mystery about Mrs. Isabel Foale, the absentee landlady, Margaret Russell is concerned over the illness of Hilary, an 8-year-old whom Margaret is caring for in the rented house.

Chapter XIII

There were surprisingly few general practitioners in the town; it seemed to be a refuge for specialists. Margaret, calling grimly by alphabet, grew mounting anxiety. A muffled sound through her mind, hospital corridors, the accusing faces of Hilary's parents. She had a number of frustrating encounters before she got hold of Dr. A. J. Wimple. His nurse said he would come as soon as possible after office hours, probably between six and seven o'clock.

Lena left at four; Margaret thanked her and saw her go with a queer strong reluctance.

Jerome Kincaid called at five. Until she heard his voice Margaret had forgotten that he was to have taken her to dinner tonight. She explained lightly, covering her own surprising disappointment, and Kincaid said reflectively, "You know, she looked like the kind of child who might do this."

"I'm sorry. I do wish she'd picked another time."

"I'll bet this is the first time she's been sick in years," said Kincaid. He sounded gloomy. "Well, that seems to take care of tonight. Is there anything I can do? Errands to run?"

"I don't think so, thanks. If the doctor gives her something he'll have it delivered."

"Maybe tomorrow, then 'How's Cornelia, by the way?'"

"Fine, I suppose."

"They didn't call last night?"

"No. Of course," said Margaret, mostly for her own benefit.

"There's no real reason why they should."

"There is now," returned Kincaid mildly. "They ought to know you're in charge of a sick-bed, if only to make them a little more grateful. No news of your wandering landlady?"

"Mrs. Foale?" Margaret was somehow astonished. "No."

What did he expect, she wondered presently, after she had left the phone—postcards? Little bulletins from abroad?

She found Hilary awake, listlessly pinning the edge of her sheet with her scissors, forestalling any kind of severity with a complaining, "I can't swallow."

"Yes, you can," said Margaret after an alarmed second. "You've been asleep, and your throat is dry. Wouldn't you like some soap?"

Hilary recoiled from the mention of soap, tea, milk, egg-nogs, or ginger ale. She finally unbent to shudder, which she swallowed, Margaret noticed, as though she were eating jagged stones. Would the doctor never come?

Like an answer to prayer, the doorbell rang. Margaret had left the porch light on with the coming of darkness; she put a hand to the lock, thankfully, and snatched it back as though she had been scorched.

There he was, the man who called himself Julio, only a thin width of curtained glass away; big hat, shabby serpentine body, smiling at her with foolish determination, brim-shadowed eyes taking in the empty room behind her. While she stood there, frozen, he put out a finger without moving his gaze from hers and pressed the doorbell again. It made a mad nightmarish sound in Margaret's ears, face to face as they were.

She lifted her voice to penetrate the glass. "Go away, please. There's someone sick here."

He said something she didn't hear, and turned the doorknob. Although the lock was on, Margaret's heart gave an enormous pound of panic; he could probably smash the door open, if he tried hard enough, and he could easily break a pane just above the lock. She gathered her voice and repeated clearly, "Go away. At once."

His hand went out, the doorbell shrilled again. He was very determined; he had found a source of money in this house and knew she was here alone with a child.

The doorknob turned again, the wood pressed slightly in. Margaret's throat was tight with not bursting into gasps of panic; he would, in that case, smash the glass instantly. She could not turn off the porch light and walk away, because then, for all she knew, he might be trying the back door, or the cellar entrance, or the windows.

She would have to stand there holding him off with a stare as immobile as his, until something happened.

Hilary called her, querulously.

Margaret didn't turn her head. She was too terrified to move, to turn her back on him for the necessary time it would take to get to the telephone, call the police, identify herself and her address and her complaint.

The man outside made a sudden movement of fury, mouthed something she didn't hear, and turned and waved out of the light. On the very edge of it, face now buried in darkness, he turned back and lifted a fist and shook it at her.

Situation About Bowles Not Clear

By JAMES MARLOW

Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—Ever since last summer Chester Bowles, No. 2 in the State Department, has looked like a man who had been put on probation but was going to lose his job anyway.

President Kennedy seemed unable to make up his mind about his undersecretary of state. It was hardly a good or happy situation for a State Department man who had to deal with foreign governments. Bowles seemed to want to cling to the job.

Now Kennedy has bounced him from the undersecretary's job, offered him another.

Sunday, in the first big shakeup of his administration Kennedy shifted around a group of White House and State Department officials, including Bowles.

All the changes were specific except the one affecting Bowles who had been an adviser to Kennedy in the 1960 presidential campaign, head of the Office of Price Administration during the war, an ambassador to India, and governor of Connecticut.

In Bowles' case Kennedy was just as vague as he had been before. The announcement made from Kennedy's headquarters at Hyannis Port said simply that Bowles would get a "high policy-making position."

Perhaps this means he'll be offered a job as roving ambassador. If so, it's the kind of job rumored in store for him last summer when it became clear, but perhaps not to Bowles, that his days as undersecretary were numbered.

Two things are odd about this case: the way Kennedy handled the man who was next in command to Secretary Dean Rusk at the State Department; and the way Bowles took for months what amounted to a public embarrassment.

In the first place it has never been made clear—certainly not officially clear—why Kennedy was dissatisfied with Bowles.

Last summer for several days there were news stories predicting Bowles was going to be yanked and made a roving ambassador because he didn't get along well in the State Department and was not a good administrator.

This didn't make much sense in view of the high administrative jobs Bowles had handled: as boss of OPA during the war and, after it, of the Office of Price Stabilization, and as governor of his state.

This writer has been told by a source who ought to know that Bowles did get along well at State. It's an educated guess that Bowles and Kennedy didn't get along well.

The stories predicting Bowles' downfall indicated the information critical of his performance at State came from White House people close to Kennedy.

But the anti-Bowles outburst was followed by a story—clearly pointing to its unnamed informant as men around Bowles—which said bluntly he'd get out of the Kennedy administration if he was removed as undersecretary.

The same day the pro-Bowles story appeared, Kennedy lunched with him and the White House denied Bowles was leaving.

This inspired liberal Sen. Joseph S. Clark of Pennsylvania, Democrat and supporter of liberal Bowles, to announce on the Senate floor the conflict involving Bowles was "all over." It didn't seem over to a lot of people in Washington.

Then Kennedy added to the uncertainty by saying at a news conference he had never asked Bowles for his resignation, had complete confidence in him, and always expected him to serve out the life of his administration.

But—Kennedy didn't say Bowles would not be removed as undersecretary. He said, instead, that as of then he thought Bowles should stay as undersecretary, that he had no plans to ask him to take another assignment, but that he would ask Bowles if he thought he would fit in better somewhere else.

That wasn't the same as saying he was going to remain undersecretary. Then it became a mat-

Doctor Tells Knight to Slow Down

BURBANK, Calif. (AP)—Goodwin J. Knight's campaign to regain the governorship is slowing down on doctor's orders. He may have infectious hepatitis and could be laid up from three to six months.

Whether the 64-year-old Republican has hepatitis or simply a bad case of flu, he's going to take it easy for a while, Knight's press secretary said Sunday.

Dr. Carl E. Lund said he believes from clinical observation that Knight has infectious hepatitis—a serious liver ailment—but won't know for sure until results of tests are studied. Knight is in St. Joseph Hospital.

Knight's press secretary, Bob Voight, said regardless of the outcome of the hepatitis test "we have decided to slow down Knight's appearances until after the first of the year."

The white-haired ex-governor has been campaigning hard since September. He was chief executive of California from 1953 to 1958.

ter of waiting to see what happened to Bowles by that time—because of Kennedy's vagueness—it was apparent that Bowles was on the chute.

First public concerts for which admission was charged were given in London by violinist John Banister in 1672.

The Dutch commissioner for southern New Guinea, F. R. J. Eibrink Jansen, called a special news conference Sunday to deny that young Rockefeller, in his quest for artifacts, stirred up headhunting among the primitive Asmat tribes.

Dr. Jan Boendermaker, deputy governor of Dutch New Guinea, had said in the Netherlands that Michael had started a revival of the old headhunting practice by offering to buy skulls.

"It is not correct that Mike wanted to buy skulls as a primary purpose," said Jansen. "He may have tried to buy them as part of relic collecting."

DOROTHY DIX

Son's Wife
Variable as the Wind

Dear Helen: My son has just asked me to forget that his wife ever existed. She is as unpredictable as the wild wind. Twice she left my boy and their three lovely children in the middle of the night, slipping off without a word of explanation. In time she wanted to come back so my husband and I sent her transportation money. Then, three months later, she abruptly kissed us all goodbye and again went home to her parents. Aside from a very personal farewell letter to my boy, there has been no further news of her. Now, he wants me to sell her things and put her out of heart and mind. This, I find hard to do, since she was a member of our family for 12 years.

I love my grandchildren and hate to see their home collapse. My husband died recently. Having no one to confide in, I turn to you. Please help me to act wisely so that I may again sleep at night. —Unhappy Grandmother

Dear Unhappy Grandmother: Legally, neither you nor your son have any right to dispose of your daughter-in-law's possessions without her consent, or a court order. Query her by mail. Keep the tone of the letter warm-hearted but firm.

Say that by remaining away she is hurting not only you, your son and the children, but herself. Register the letter and request a return receipt. Mark it "Please Forward" and address care of her parents. Since neither she nor your son have fully confided in you, there is no way of knowing what has gone on between them. A reconciliation may be out of the question but at least you can try. A consultation with the family physician may be indicated.

Dear Helen: In our circle of friends there is one couple with 11 children. The mother throws a big birthday party for each every year. My children have been to 11 parties at their house and taken 11 gifts. We feel that this is degenerating into a gift racket.

None of our other friends follow this custom, although many, including myself, have fair-sized families. My children celebrate their birthdays with cake, ice cream and a few gifts from the immediate family. Why can't this other mother realize that it is an imposition to expect birthday gifts from outsiders? Are we being small-minded? I'd like to hear some comment on the situation. —Gift Weary

Dear Gift Weary: Agreed that this mother of 11 is overdoing it a bit but that's not for you to say, particularly if she is a friend. With the acceptance of an invitation goes an obligation to reciprocate. Since your children attend the parties they should take a present, however inconsequential. It is not the cost but the thought, which matters. Your youngsters might even make the gifts, and in this way, learn to practice the spirit, as well as the letter, in giving.

Dear Helen: I should like to help in an orphanage after I graduate from Savannah High School next May. I shall then be 18 and, because of my love for children, feel qualified to work with them. Could you give me any information on the subject? —Sharon Low, St. Joseph, Mo.

Dear Sharon: Orphanages, like poor houses, are almost a thing of the past. Have a talk with the social worker of the welfare agency in your town. She might arrange for you to visit one of the foster homes which have supplanted the orphanages. The theory today is that a child develops along more normal lines when placed with a family.

SWC Play Will End on Saturday

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Except for the Rice - Baylor game that may get Rice in a bowl, all the business of interest has been transacted in Southwest Conference football for the season.

Texas and Arkansas are co-champions, having wound up the campaign last week with victories over Texas A&M and Texas Tech respectively. Texas got the Cotton Bowl host spot because it beat Arkansas in regular season play.

Arkansas got into the Sugar Bowl, where it is expected to meet Alabama.

Texas' lone can't be officially announced until next Saturday although it has long been known that Mississippi would be the Longhorns' opposition at Dallas Jan. 1. Mississippi closes the season against Mississippi State Saturday.

Rice, with a 6-3 record, can nail down the Bluebonnet Bowl at Houston if it trumps Baylor at Houston Saturday.

Rice knocked Texas Christian out of bowl consideration last week when the Owls hammered the Horned Frogs 35-16.

Texas wound up with a 25-0 decision over old foe Texas A&M while Arkansas tumbled Texas Tech 28-0.

Baylor lashed Southern Methodist 31-6.

Texas Christian and Southern Methodist close the season at Fort Worth Saturday.

The only other conference member with a game left in Texas Tech, which meets West Texas State of the Border Conference at Lubbock.

Arkansas accomplished more than anybody. The Razorbacks roared back from the Texas defeat to finish out the campaign for an 8-2 record and gain a share of the championship.

It was the third year in a row for the Razorbacks to figure in the title. They tied for it in 1959, won it outright in 1960. Texas A&M was the only school to previously gain a title or share of it three seasons in a row. The Aggies' record actually was better than Arkansas', however, since they won two titles and tied for one.

Oilers and Chargers to Meet Sat.

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF

Associated Press Sports Writer

Houston's point-made Oilers get the San Diego Chargers on the home lot this week and it's the big game in more ways than one for Wally Lemm's hard-bitten crew.

Houston can kill two birds with one George Blanda — just about sew up the Eastern Division championship of the American Football League and show that San Diego is human after all. By so doing the Oilers could become favorites to repeat as champion, too.

San Diego hasn't yet lost a game and already is Western Division king. Things have come pretty easy for the Chargers. Houston, on the other hand, had to dig out of a terrifying early season slump. If a team profits more from mistakes, the Oilers ought to be just about perfect.

They have won six games in a row and averaged 40 points per contest. They beat New York 49-13, which is a point better than San Diego could do.

Houston has only three games to go and the first is San Diego. If it wins this one it can expect to cop the Eastern Division title and clash with San Diego in the league playoff. Only New York and Oakland remain and Houston should have no worries about those outfits.

Houston walloped Denver 45-14 Sunday and showed San Diego that, while it holds the AFL record for pass-interceptions with 43, it has no corner on this statistic. Houston gobbled up six Denver passes Sunday and, like San Diego does, turned some of them into scores.

Blanda was in his usual fine fettle, passing for a touchdown, kicking a field goal and booting six extra points. He also engineered long drives for touchdowns.

Dallas and Oakland played a meaningless game Sunday but it was the occasion for Abner Haynes, the versatile Dallas half-back, to put on his biggest show.

Lil Abner scored five touchdowns and rushed for 158 yards as Dallas beat Oakland 13-11. He set one-game league records for touchdowns, points, rushing and making the most touchdowns by rushing, four. Haynes bettered the 26-point day Blanda had last year.

Nov. 26. Funeral arrangements are incomplete and will be announced by Hicks Funeral Home.

Head Injuries Cause Grid Fatalities

DENVER (AP)—Head injuries are mainly responsible for the 32 known fatalities in football this season, an American Medical Association expert reported Sunday.

While football headgear has been vastly improved, "there is still much to be done before protection approaches ideal standards," said Dr. Allan J. Ryan of Meriden, Conn., chairman of the AMA's committee on medical aspects of sports.

Dr. Ryan said his reports show 22 high school football deaths this season. This represents two per 100,000 participants. The other fatalities were 7 collegians, 2 semipro and 1 sandlot player.

A rigid plastic helmet using an interior suspension system is the best available headgear, Dr. Ryan said, but not all football teams are equipped with this type because of its cost.

An important step toward cutting down football injuries, Dr. Ryan said, would be the employment of team physicians who would be consulted about training methods and equipment purchases.

He said his committee considers pre-season all-star games at the high school level "very bad because usually the players are not in top physical condition."

Available records prove, he said, that injuries occur most frequently before the player reaches

Brewer Had to Do It for Victory

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — "I knew I had to do it," Gay Brewer Jr. admitted with a grin after he sank at 15-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole Sunday to win the Mobile Open golf tournament by one stroke in a tension-packed finish.

Johnny Pott finished ahead of him with a five 6-under-par 66 after starting the round a stroke back. Brewer was five under par going into the par four, 20-yard 18th and needed a birdie to take the match.

The 29-year-old Crystal River, Fla. pro dropped his approach shot on the downhill side of the green 15 feet from the pin. He addressed the ball briefly and then rolled it into the cup for a closing 66, giving him 275 for 72 holes of play.

Brewer picked up $2,000 for his second tournament victory of the year and boosted his official earnings to $26,249.

Pott of Shreveport, La., took second place and $1,500. He also came in second last year.

Defending champion Arnold Palmer and Doug Sanders of Ojai, Calif., tied for third, five strokes back of Pott, and received $1,100 each.

Top money winners: Gay Brewer Jr. 69-66-74-66—275 ($2,000)

Johnny Pott 70-69-71-66 — 276 ($1,500)

Arnold Palmer 72-70-70-69—281 ($1,100)

Patterson in Toronto for Fight

TORONTO (AP)—World heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson and challenger Tom McNeely are in Toronto for their Dec. 4 title fight at Maple Leaf Gardens.

McNeely, the 23-year-old Boston challenger, arrived Sunday night. Patterson has been in Toronto a couple of weeks.

McNeely, who impressed reporters as being shy but confident, made no attempt to downgrade Patterson but declared:

"If I didn't think I had the experience and ability I wouldn't be here for the fight."

He conceded the champion's great speed.

"Patterson's hands are very fast," he said. "I've never met anybody like that. I'll have no special defense except that I consider offense is the best defense."

In viewing films of Patterson's previous fights, McNeely said, he had noticed some mistakes the champion made. He didn't say what they were.
